HIGH STUDENTS OUST A HOODOO TO COURT LUCK

Black and Gold Boosters Make Merry in Great Football Gathering

McKinley High School fairly bubbled over with enthusiasm last night when more than 300 students and boosters of the Black and Gold gathered in the assembly hall to participate in one of the biggest football rallies ever held in Honolulu. The Hoodoo which has made its headquarters at the High School for the past four years, causing that institution to lose continually in all forms of sport, was put to rout. He was tried before a surrogate jury and hung before the eyes of those present and, as a result, the entire student body is on Alexander Field this afternoon prepared to cheer the McKinley gridiron squad to a possible victory.

Things had been pretty well arranged at the High by Yell Leader Max Bolte, and a number of stunts were pulled off prior to getting into the real business of injecting spirit into the footers. A Chinese (?) band was the first number on the program, and the echoes of the racket penetrated even as far as the wilds of Thomas Square, and caused some of the oldest residents to sit up in their beds and listen. Following this, Professor Spagetti (Cliff Melin), attired in costume acrobatic, did the wonderful loop-de-loop on a speeding motorcycle, the humor of the thing bringing roars of laughter from the audience. The Kakaake Quartet made another hit, but it did not observe the rule of "sing hard and stick to the tune." Some good singing followed this, a double quartet composed of old-time glee club men, rendering "In the Evening by the Moonlight" and "Roll Dem Bones."

The big stunt of the evening was the trial of the McKinley Hoodoo, and it was snappy with humor from start to finish. "Fat" Hart—who claims that he does not weigh 207 pounds—was the judge, while "Red" Crozier officiated as clerk and persisted in confiscating the candy and other eatables which the members of the jury were wont to consume during the trial. "Gloomy" Reidford appeared as attorney for the Hoodoo, while Joe Silva handled the role of prosecuting attorney. The jury, it may be said, was composed of the following occupants of the right side of the assembly hall: Ruth Seybolt, Ragnhild Hansen, Violet Lucas, Margaret McCarthy, Georgia Armstrong, Iselene Reis, Winona Wallace, Charlotte Dowsett, Gladys Kruger, Lillian Penhall, Lei Alana and Madeline Smith. Starting evidence on the part of the prosecuting attorney was nipped in the bud by Lawyer Reidford, and it looked for a while as if the Hoodoo (Dave Kahalewai) would get off free. At the conclusion of the trial the judge asked to jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty, but the surrogate members of that body, brandishing their "Votes for Women," and "Down with Man" signs, did not appear to like the looks of the Hoodoo, and refused to declare him innocent. The judge sentenced him to death by hanging, and a guard of ferocious looking soldiers escorted the poor unfortunate out of the place. The booming of pop guns announced his demise, and he was returned to the platform and strung up in good shape. Thus ended the Hoodoo.

Yell Leader Bolte, armed with a megaphone, led a dozen yells, both old and new, and the building rang with the very cream of school spirit and enthusiasm. It was something that McKinley has never before witnessed, and the old grads who were present were surprised and delighted, to think that their Alma Mater had "come back." Class songs followed, and at the conclusion of these, the speakers were announced. Ted Tracy, one of McKinley's most distinguished graduates and a former football man, congratulated the students on their fine spirit, and told of the need of such spirit on the gridiron. His remarks were highly instructive, and at the conclusion he was greeted with fine raps.

William Rosa, a graduate of McKinley and perhaps one of the best full-backs ever turned out by a local school, or a mainland school for that matter, gave advice to both the rooters and the football men. "This is the first time that I have ever seen such enthusiasm displayed by the High School," he said, "and it is surprising to think that old McKinley can come back in this fashion." To the football team he cited a number of situations in games which he had played in, giving advice here and there and speaking from the standpoint of one who knows the game. Edward B. Blanchard, formerly a professor in the McKinley High School, and for several years coach of that institution's football squad, spoke of the need of enthusiasm on the part of a school if it would help its athletic teams to secure victory. His remarks were brief and to the point. Last, but not least, was Glenn Jackson, One College, '13, whose snappy remarks aroused the students to a fer-

PRINCETON, N. J.—Football, the game that grips the college youth, is now well under way for the 1913-1914 season and Captain Hobey Baker of the varsity eleven predicts great things for his team before the end of the season. The coaches, Anderson and Blumenthal, are enthusiastic over the outlook and put in some hard kicks during the practice season, in hopes of giving Princeton one of the best eleven she has had in several years. About 40 candidates appeared for practice in the early days and were daily put through an hour's rugged work before the final selection of varsity timber was made.

MAUI BASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP TO BE SETTLED

Last Game of Deciding Series Takes Place at Wailuku Tomorrow

Maui is simply running over with splendid baseball enthusiasm, according to A. Q. Marcellino, who returned to Honolulu on the Mauna Kea this morning after a short visit to the Valley Isle.

Tomorrow two crack Maui nines, the Kahului team and the Morning Stars of Wailuku, will settle their rivalry with the final game of a play-off series of three for the championship. Each team has won one game of the play-off series and the fans are wild over tomorrow's contest.

The Asahi team is going over from Honolulu for a New Year's contest, says Marcellino, and the Maui fans are already looking forward to it. Until he got back to Honolulu he did not know that the All-Chinese were intending to take a trip to Maui, and he said he had heard nothing of the proposed series while on the Valley Isle.

"The All-Maui team that made such a good showing here had a grand reunion and luau last night and it certainly was a pleasant affair," said Marcellino this morning. "Those boys are princes at entertaining. I never had a better time in my life than on this trip. Last night's luau took place at the home of Ben Lyons."

SOPHS WINNERS IN BASKETBALL WITH SENIORS

Upperclassmen Take Defeat in Second Game of the Series

In a close and exciting contest yesterday afternoon the sophomore girls of Oahu College defeated the seniors in the second game of the interclass basketball series, by a score of 9 to 11. Throughout the contest the winner was doubtful, and when the lower classmen turned out the victors they congratulated themselves upon defeating the all-powerful seniors.

The seniors did their best to score one more basket on the sophs, but the younger girls proved to be too fast and steady for them, and they lost the game. The team work of the sophomores was very good and the ball spent a large part of its time around the lower classmen's basket. For the winners, Miss Marie McVeigh, captain of the team, and Miss Ida Desha, played good games. It was largely through their work that the sophomores won.

The captain of the senior team again distinguished herself by playing a star game, but there were not enough good players on her side to win. The seniors have been defeated twice and have no chance for the interclass series, the final game of which will be played on Monday.

Those who played for the seniors were Misses Elizabeth Woods, captain; Violet Austin, Louise Churchill, Milward Deas, Genevieve Taggart and Ruth Anderson, while the sophomore team was composed of Misses Marie McVeigh, captain; Alice Yarborough, Ruth Farrington, Ida Desha, Dorothy Walker and Dora Larkgate. On Monday, the juniors and sophomores will play for the championship. Both these teams have defeated the seniors and this game promises to be the closest so far. As a suitable closing to this series, the winner of Monday's game will play a picked team.

RALLY AT O.C. PROVES TO BE ENTHUSIASTIC

Boosters and Rooters Gather to Arouse Spirit for the Initial Game

For the purpose of arousing spirit among the students of Punahou for the game to be played this afternoon on Alexander field between the McKinley High School and Oahu College, a meeting was held of all the enthusiastic football fans of the school yesterday. Nearly all the pupils were present to hear the speeches of the coaches and President Griffiths, and to take part in the cheering practice.

Coach Frank Midkiff spoke first. He mentioned a few of his experiences in college and told of the way the high schools in the States practiced and put into effect their cheering. He was greeted very warmly by the students and all of them appreciated what he said. Next came Assistant Coach J. C. Wine, who told a number of funny stories and gave an interesting talk, the larger part of which dealt with school spirit and cheering. He was also loudly applauded by the students. Following Wine came President Griffiths, who was followed in turn by Captain "Bill" Immen. Both gave shorter talks than the ones who went before them, speaking on subjects pertaining to school spirit.

As a proper ending of the meeting, the cheer leaders took charge and for five or 10 minutes all other sounds in Punahou hall were drowned by the students' lusty yells and songs.

CARLIN WINS FROM DONOVAN IN THE FOURTH

Fight Fans Are Treated to Some Good Contests at Schofield Last Night

[Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence]
SCHOFIELD BARRACKS, Oct. 17.—The colors of the much-heralded Bud Walters, the champion, in his weight of the Orient, were reversed for the distress signal in the 10-round go last night at the infantry amusement hall by the clever little flatfoot sportsman Bud Roundtree of the coast defense. It was easily the fight of the evening's card and the interest here made it a favorite over the Donovan-Carlin fight, the main event of the evening.

Rarely has a fighter been shown here who had the classy press notices that Walters had and seldom have the fans been so disappointed in a fighter's inability to live up to his reputation. The newcomer proved a fast man, much given to the strut game and with a minimum of science backed up with considerable sand. He showed a savage left uppercut and some punch behind a right overhand swing, but his showing last night stopped there. He took a tremendous amount of severe punishment from Roundtree and showed considerable ring generalship when, in the eighth round, he saw the fight "bound" towards a decision for Roundtree and came back in time to force the fight to a draw. Roundtree had the science and the weight to offset the seeming advantage Walters had in height and reach and after a round or two of dodging wild swings and avoiding belated upper cuts Roundtree had the fight his own way. Walters responded gamely to the entreaties of his artillery backers and made a game finish but the consensus of the fans' opinion here is that Walters would have been down and out had the fight gone two rounds longer. Walters indulged in some dirty tactics in the fourth round which sent his stock to the bad with the local fans when Major Butta's decision in elevating the hands of both men was not a popular one, but it was undoubtedly fair and Walters scored heavily by his recovery in the later rounds. Walters did not exhibit nearly the knowledge of the game that he has shown in his training bouts and was wilder than any fighter seen here in many months.

The final bout was a surprise to the fans because of the absence of the old-time ginger that Donovan has had in his other appearances, and Carlin's improvement was nothing short of remarkable. He fought more on the offensive than before and no one was more surprised than Donovan at the adoption of Donovan's own tactics. The opening round was about even but Carlin's aggressive fighting from the second round on paying the way to an early victory. The knockout came early in the fourth with a right crop to Donovan's neck following close after a short right jab to the solar plexus. Donovan started to rise at the fifth second only to roll over for the full count. This fight marks the passing from the ring, for a time at least, of the favorite soldier fighter on the island. Charlie Reilly helped Carlin to get Donovan unquestionably. The fans hope to see Bill go into retirement for a while and put on some flesh, get into first class condition and come back with a manager who will use some judgment in handling him and make him keep within his weight.

The faster of the two preliminaries was the mill between Silling of the hospital corps and a 1st infantry favorite, Stout.

Silling put up a hard fight several months ago that ended in a draw after the hospital corps man had taken a severe drubbing, and the fans were hardly prepared to see him show such form as he offered last night. He has been training under Sergeant Stone of the cavalry, who can box—if he can't fight any more—and Silling looks like a coming post favorite. He put Stout away in the fifth, the knockout ending a furious succession of blows to face and neck. The feature of Silling's work was his countering and the manner in which he followed up every opening.

Pinkey Pastori performed for four rounds with Kid Stevens, which went to a draw in the fourth round. Pinkey has his usual speed but he had nothing that even looked like a punch. A large crowd from the brigade camp and from Honolulu attended and more than the usual amount of enthusiasm prevailed.

ably Mahuka is to do the slush work for the Pawaas. Henry Williams, whose hard work as manager of the Pawaas has no doubt been largely responsible for the team's success, has seen E. Cushingham, just returned from the mainland, and has got his promise to show up tomorrow. If the P. A. C. defeat the Chinese team in the second game, they will be out of the running, as they have already lost two. Batteries for this game will be, P. A. C. Jr., Domingue and Asing; C. A. U., Aki and Apau.

WAILUKU GYM. IN HEALTHY CONDITION

WAILUKU, Maui, Oct. 17.—At the meeting of the Alexander House Gymnasium committee held last Monday evening at the gymnasium, the report was presented that a total of seventy-three new members had joined the gymnasium as full paid up members during the last three months, and that the total of paid up members up to the time of the meeting was one hundred and eleven. This does not include a large number who had paid for recent months, but had been a month in arrears. The committee felt that there must be some thirty of these members, so that the total membership at present is larger than at any other time in the history of the organization.

The swimming pool has been put into first class condition by the laying of water pipes from the county supply. The classes now using the tank are larger than ever before.

Thursday night is now strictly reserved as ladies night, when the young women and older girls meet at the gymnasium for basket ball and bowling. Indoor baseball is most popular among the men, on other nights in the week, and the bowling alley and pool room are in constant use all the time that the men and boys have access to the building.

It is expected that soon one or two public games will be run off in the evenings, so that the people of Maui can see what fast work the gym teams are capable of, and what good form they are in. The practice of late has been watched with much interest.

HILO FIGHT IS ONE-SIDED AFFAIR

[Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence]
HILO, Oct. 17.—Apart from the fact that Eulogio Homeres was game there was very little, indeed, to warrant his facing Ben de Mello in a boxing match. As undoubtedly Eulogio now fully realizes, the two men were matched for $109 a side for a fifteen-round contest. Apparently Eulogio, upon more mature consideration, concluded that the distance was too long, for he made a strenuous endeavor to have it cut down to 10 rounds. Announcement that the bout would be confined to 10 rounds was made from the ring, but this was objected to by the ringwalkers, and, after a consultation, Eulogio consented to split the difference and go for 12 rounds.

The distance need not have worried Eulogio, as events proved, for that was the least of his troubles. For five rounds the two men faced each other, with de Mello mercilessly jabbing his opponent in the mouth and nose and trying for a knock-out with his left hand, while Eulogio vainly endeavored to hit de Mello an effective blow. It was a pitiable exhibition, for there was not the slightest chance of the Filipino making any impression upon his opponent. Eulogio took considerable punishment, but came back for more each time. He used his right hand freely, but his left seemed useless, either for defensive or offensive purpose.

As often as de Mello liked he jabbed Eulogio in the mouth and the blood streamed down until finally de Mello himself got disgruntled and asked his opponent to quit. Eulogio wanted to fight on, but Referee Keelen, a few seconds later, stopped the contest and gave the decision to de Mello. Had de Mello dared to use his right hand the fight would probably have ended in the second, or at the latest, the third round, but after his recent misdeed to this arm de Mello contented himself with straight lefts throughout, varied occasionally with a right jab and a left cross.

Young Jeffries and Young Jackson put up a spirited four-round contest which proved to be to the liking of the crowd there assembled. The decision was a draw.

The second preliminary was changed as Richards did not appear and a relative of Jim Hono, named "Louis," was untrained and also unskilled. Pedro, the Filipino champion, endeavored to spar lightly with Louis but forgot himself in the second round and hit a trifle too savagely, whereupon Louis got somewhat battered and Referee Klemme stopped the bout, giving the decision to Pedro Paglanawan.

In the morning many amber and jade necklaces are being worn. The rather bright colors of these stones look quaint and amusing against the whiteness of the crepon or linen chemise.
